

Do I have a right to the internet?

Merten says:

We do have a human right to the internet because without the internet, we can't have our other human rights.

For example, we can't have our right to freedom of speech and freedom of education unless we have access to the internet.

Merten says:
Everyone should have the internet, but governments need to make the internet safer, just like they make the physical world safer.

What do you think?

How do you think the internet could be dangerous?
